Background

Businesses across Canada have been affected by the current recession and market collapse of the global economy. Some economic driver sectors (bringing new wealth into the community), such as construction, have been affected more than others, but economic supporter sectors (circulating wealth in the community) such as retail, are also impacted.

To gauge the level of business confidence in Nanaimo, the City of Nanaimo's Economic Development Office sent out a survey to all business licence holders in the city. The survey asked questions regarding several factors contributing to overall business confidence levels, including staffing and investment plans, as well as current demand for their product or service.

Process

In November 2008, the survey was mailed out to City of Nanaimo Business Licence holders, along with their 2009 Business Licence renewal form. A copy of the survey is attached as Appendix A. The results included in this report represent the 1,034 surveys that were returned by the submission deadline of January 15, 2009. This survey is not meant to be scientific, but merely an opportunity to gauge the level of overall business confidence in the community.

Outcomes

The Economic Development Office received 1,034 completed surveys which represents almost 20% of the active business licences in the City of Nanaimo. The survey includes eight questions, the responses to which are displayed as graphs in this report. A majority of businesses who responded to the survey predict their overall business situation will be the same in one year.

Summary

A copy of this Business Confidence Report is available to anyone and will be posted on the City of Nanaimo's website at www.nanaimo.ca on the Economic Development Office's homepage by March 2009.
